

Presentation: From the Academic Workplace: Case Studies of Ethical Issues for Faculty of Professional Schools in Austria and the US

Samuel E. Henry was born into a tri-ethnic Black family in Washington D.C., taught in secondary schools, and after earning master's and doctorate degrees from Columbia University Teachers College, he served as a university leader and faculty member. He works in areas of culture contact, organizational leadership, curriculum and international affairs.

Ulrike Hugl has studied economics, social sciences and law at the University of Innsbruck, Austria, her dissertation was on qualitative content analysis and mind-mapping. She led efforts at information management at the University of St. Gallen, Switzerland, and a higher education reform at the University of Innsbruck.

ABSTRACT

Case Studies in a business school in Austria and an education school in the U.S. suggests a need for critical faculty action to deal with ethical issues in the classroom.